

~EN-TAPPUAH (24)

(En-Tap'pu-ah) [Fountain or, Spring of the Apple Tree]

- A spring by the city of Tappuah, used as a point of definition of the boundary between the inheritance of the tribe of Manasseh and that of Ephraim.
- And the boundary of Manasseh came to be from Asher to Michmethath, which is in front of Shechem, and the boundary moved to the right to the inhabitants of En-Tappuah. (Joshua 17:7)
- The name may have also been used for the city of Tappuah itself.
- The land of Tappuah became Manasseh's, but Tappuah at the boundary of Manasseh belonged to the sons of Ephraim. (Joshua 17:8)
- Some identify En-Tappuah with a spring near the city of Yasuf, to the South of which lies Tell Sheikh Abu Zarad, the suggested location of Tappuah.
