

Ezekiel 27:26 Into vast waters those rowing you have brought you. The east wind itself has broken you in the heart of the open sea.

[8] - References:

- But whoever stumbles one of these little ones who put faith in me, it is more beneficial for him to have hung around his neck a millstone such as is turned by an ass and to be sunk in the wide, open sea. (Matthew 18:6)
- And the second angel blew his trumpet. And something like a great mountain burning with fire was hurled into the sea. And a third of the sea became blood. (Revelation 8:8)
- The inhabitants of Sidon and of Arvad themselves became rowers for you. Your skilled ones, O Tyre, happened to be in you, they were your sailors. (Ezekiel 27:8)
- With an east wind you wreck the ships of Tarshish. (Psalms 48:7)
- Those going down to the sea in the ships, doing business on vast waters. (Psalms 107:23)
- The sea has come up even over Babylon. By the multitude of its waves she has been covered. (Jeremiah 51:42)
- Down to the pit they will bring you, and you must die the death of someone slain in the heart of the open sea. (Ezekiel 28:8)
- Look! Yehowah himself will dispossess her, and into the sea he will certainly strike down her military force, and in the fire she herself will be devoured. (Zechariah 9:4)